B'klyn cabby held in fatal smashup

By PHILIP MESSING and DOUG WIGHT

A boozed-up 21-year-old livery cabby was arrested on a charge of criminally negligent homicide yesterday after a Brooklyn crash in which a friend was killed, police said.

Two other two passengers in Nikolay Kamayev's vehicle were injured during the early-morning accident at East Fourth Street and Bay Parkway, cops said.

Police said Kamayev, of 1710 E. 17th St., was speeding north on Bay Parkway when he lost control of his 1995 Lincoln Town car and crashed into a tree.

Alexandre Kolychkin, 23, was dead at the scene.

Kamayev and two passengers in the back seat, Roman Brudner, 22, and Vera Struchkovskaya, 21, were all taken to Lutheran Hospital in stable condition.

Even though he was driving his livery cab, Kamayev was off duty. The four, all friends, had been at a restaurant and were heading to another pal's house, police said.

Law-enforcement sources said Kamayev was believed to have been driving between 56 mph and 70 mph, and registered .08 on a Breathalyzer test — just below the legal threshold to support a drunken-driving charge.

But the sources said a second blood sample would be taken.
