CITY TO PROVIDE ASSISTANCE TO COMPANIES FOR REMOVAL AND DISPOSAL OF COMMERCIAL WASTE

Chairman Raymond Casey of the Trade Waste Commission (TWC) and New York City Economic Development Corporation President Michael G. Carey announced that the TWC and EDC are working to help businesses with the removal of commercial waste.

Any commercial establishment south of Canal Street and outside the fenced-off zone in Lower Manhattan that requires carting services and cannot contact its carter should call the TWC at the Office of Emergency Management Command Center at 646-756-3115 or 3114.

The TWC will arrange for the carting companies to access the restricted areas in Lower Manhattan to provide service. The TWC is available 24 hours a day to help deal with waste removal issues.

New York City Employees

and President Michael Cary of the Economic Development Corporation ("EDC") announced the following:

During this tragedy, the TWC and the EDC are working diligently to help get businesses in New York City up and running normally. The TWC is responsible for regulating the removal and disposal of commercial waste from City businesses by private carting companies. If any commercial establishment south of Canal Street and outside the fenced-off zone requires carting services and has any trouble contacting their carter, please call the Trade Waste Commission at the Office of Emergency Management Command Center at 646-756-3115 or 3114. The TWC will arrange for the carting companies to access the restricted areas in lower Manhattan in order to provide service. The TWC is available 24 hours a day to help you deal with any waste removal issues that you may have.
