Ricoh, USA has donated wireless digital cameras (i700, http://www.ricohzone.com/Product_RDCi700.html) to DEP for use at the WTC disaster. These cameras have the ability of taking a digital photo and sending it to e-mail addresses via built-in wireless technology. Prior to sending, the photos can be marked-up by use of a stylus on the built-in screen. In addition, a brief audio recording, describing the photo, can also be attached to the picture. I'm told that the system is simple to easy to learn and operate.

I envision these cameras being used to send images to key personnel as an aid in describing a situation or condition... a picture is worth a thousand words.

Below, I've indicated you office e-mail address. Should you want to be able to receive images at home, please provide me with an appropriate e-mail address.
